ON A NAUGHTY BOY, SLEEPING. BY BRET HARTE. Just now I missed from ball and stair A joyful treble that had grown

As dear to me as that grave tone That tells the world my older care. And little footsteps on the floor Were stayed. I laid aside my pen,

Forgot my theme, and listened; then Stole softly to the library door. No sight! no sound !- a moment's freak Of fancy thrilled my pulses through:

"If-no"-and yet that fancy drew A father's blood from heart and cheek. And then-I found him. There he lay Surprised by sleep, caught in the act, The rosy vandal who had sacked His little town and thought it play.

The shattered vase; the broken jar; A match still smouldering on the floo The inkstand's purple pool of gore; Strewn leaves of albums lightly pressed

This wicked "Baby of the woods;" In fact, of half the household goods This son and heir was seized-po-Yet all in vain, for sleep had caught

The hand that reached, the feet that strayed: And fallen in that ambuscade, The victor was himself o'erwrought

What though torn leaves and tattered Still testify his deep uisgrace? I stooped and kissed his inky face, With its demure and calm outlook.

Then back I stole, and half beguiled My guilt, in trust that when my sleep Should come, there might be one who'
